The Research Journal Club at Orange Coast College	Why Research?	Have you ever wanted an inside look into what research is truly like - grad school and beyond? In conjunction with generous faculty, The Research Journal Club at Orange Coast College aims to satisfy that curiosity by virtually hosting an interdisciplinary panel of OCC professors with valuable experience as researchers and academics. Are you interested in research, but aren't quite sure how you're supposed to start? We have you covered. By attending, our hope is that you will come away with a more nuanced understanding of: The positive effects that participation in research can have on your academic career. How involvement with research can make you a more competitive candidate when applying to universities after graduation from OCC. How research differs discipline to discipline (e.g., history versus biology). How you can get involved with research as OCC students through the annual Giles T. Brown Research Symposium and the Honors Transfer Council of California (HTCC).	Friday, April 23, 2021 from 5:00pm - 6:30pm online.
