Coast Crew Competes Against the World's Elite Rowing Programs at Henley Regatta

The Orange Coast College men's Crew wrapped up a spectacular 2018 season by qualifying for the 2018 Henley Regatta in London in late June.

The Henley Royal Regatta began in 1839 and is the biggest annual gathering of the world's top rowers. For the first time since 1996, OCC made the trek across the globe to be a part of it all.

Coast competed in the Temple Challenge Cup for University and College Eights on the prestigious Thames River on June 29 as 55 boats battled for just 32 spots. After a strong qualifying session, OCC advanced and took on Screwsbury School in the opening round on July 4 and won at the Henley Regatta for the first time in 16 years with a time of 6 minutes, 44 seconds.

On July 5, Coast took on a powerhouse boat from the University of Washington, where the Huskies posted a victory by a length and a half with a time of 6:35, eliminating the Pirates from the regatta. It was a tough matchup for Coast as Washington would eventually go on win the Temple Challenge Cup.

"For those who have raced or watched the Henley Royal Regatta — truly nothing compares to the pomp, presentation, prestige and performance that awaited us," OCC head coach Cam Brown said. "The Temple Challenge Cup was extremely competitive with the some of the World's Best Collegiate Crews racing upriver on the Thames."

This was the 11th time in Crew's history that the Pirates raced in the Henley Royal Regatta, and Orange Coast College is the only community college to have ever participated in the 179-year history of the event.

OCC Culinary Hot Food Team Travels to New Orleans for Nationals

Orange Coast College's Hot Food Team heads to the Big Easy this week to compete on the national stage at the American Culinary Federation National Championships. The event — part of the Cook, Craft, Create ACF National Convention and Show — will be held at the Hyatt Regency near the French Quarter. The student competition brings together the best chefs and students from around the country to face off against their peers for a national title.

OCC's team earned their place at Nationals by winning a gold medal at the California Western Regional Championships in March.

At Nationals, teams are scrutinized by a panel of ACF certified judges, including "certified master-chefs" and several certified executive chefs. The competition is broken down into two phases; in Phase One basic skills are picked at random, and then demonstrated relay style and under a strict time constraint. In Phase Two, teams have 90 minutes for cooking and service for a four-course meal for four.

OCC's Hot Food Team has been practicing since last fall, arriving before sunrise each Friday and some Mondays, and spending 8-10 hours in the kitchen. The days of the competition students are exposed to networking with other students and have an opportunity to receive feedback from highly accomplished chefs.

For the past 25 years, OCC Culinary has put forth student Hot Food Teams, winning the Western Region a total of nine times over the years. Results for the ACF National Competition will be announced on July 19.
